15 MONTHS IN RECOVERY

When I first came to Nick's Place it was challenging, but it taught me valuable lessons. I realize that the things that were difficult were in place to teach me a better way to live and now I understand it. In recovery, I have achieved things I never thought possible. Short-term, I aim to get a vehicle and work on my business. Long-term, I want my business to thrive with many employees. Ultimately, I dream of having a home close to my family in Israel and a home here in the US. Nick's Place has taught me a lot and I'm glad I came here because without it I wouldn't be planning a future at all.

13 MONTHS IN RECOVERY

My one-year anniversary at Nick's Place on July 18th was a significant milestone in my journey. Over the past year, my experience at Nick's place has been truly transformative. It has served as a time for deep self-reflection and self-discovery, helping me uncover my true identity as an addict. This realization has kept me grounded, reminding me to stay connected with my support network and consistently work on personal growth. In the short term, my goals are to secure long-term transitional housing and complete my degree in economics. Looking ahead, my long-term goals include finding a consistent level of happiness. I hope to have a place of my own and continue my journey of self-improvement while building meaningful and stable relationships.
